

Seeing Art Basel Miami Beach on a budget

Author: Neki Mohan, Reporter, Anchor, nmohan@Local10.com
April Rosseutscher, Intern, arosseutscher@wplg.com

Published On: Dec 03 2013 05:21:17 PM EST | Updated On: Dec 03 2013 09:43:02 PM EST

Print   Email   Recommend 10   Send 8+1 0   Tweet 4

Seeing Art Basel on a budget

MIAMI - Art Basel Miami Beach offers a variety of ways for people to see the festival on a budget.

On Tuesday, street artist Danny Fyla continued working on his mural "Free Flow" at Northwest 24th Street and 2nd Avenue in Miami's Wynwood neighborhood. The area was designated for him and other local artists to display their work.

"Wynwood Central is unique because we don't really have an area where it's just really Miami artists alone," he said.

Quick Clicks

- Not guilty plea entered in Facebook slaying case
- Mass stranding of pilot whales found in Everglades City
- Bull's-eyes, 'KKK' sprayed on buildings, buses
- Cops: 2 robbed Heat guard, restaurant
- Cops: Man shoots friend while watching football

Anyone can walk down the block and observe the art work at no charge.

Another free option that is more formal is taking place at the Freedom Tower, where Miami Dade College's art program is showcasing "Rituals of Haiti," photos by Spanish photographer Christina Garcia Rodero.

"She's a life photographer. She captures human spirit, which is in the essence the best a photographer can do," said Jeremy Mikolajczak with Miami Dade College.

Art works from internationally known artists are also being hung at the Pop Up Tent Gallery Fusion in Wynwood as well. Refreshments will be provided.